

WANT ELECTRIC LINE TO BRON

An effort to interest the Grand Rapids Street Railroad Co. in building their electric line across the proposed new bridge to the cemetery and then on to Bron was discussed at the Chamber of Commerce meeting Monday night. A committee including O. R. Roenius, D. J. Gerow, and A. F. Billmyre being appointed to see the officials of the road and find out what they are to do. A. F. Billmyre spoke on the matter, stating that he would like to see the line extended to the cemetery and thence to Bron, and stated that if they want a street car line across the bridge should be taken in that direction now. The committee will take the matter up and while officials of the company state they have never considered it seriously, it may be the initial step toward the extension of the line.

Paul Sherman is able to be out again after a very severe illness with pneumonia.

LOCAL GIRL HOLDS GOOD POSITION IN WESTERN BANK

Friends of Miss Emily Lindahl, formerly of this city but now of Watertown, S. D., will be pleased to hear of Miss Lindahl's promotion in the People's Savings Bank at Watertown to the position of assistant cashier. Miss Lindahl is a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Lindahl of this city, and her recent promotion will come as very pleasant news to her many friends here. In speaking of her promotion an official of the Watertown bank has said: "This young lady is one who has done markedly well for her age and, by hard, faithful service and by carefulness in banking work has gained the high esteem and confidence of our people as well as a responsible position."

Ernest Klingball, aged thirty-nine years, died at his home in Port Edwards last Thursday. The funeral was held Monday afternoon from the home. Burial was made in Forest Hill cemetery.

The Stewart & Edwards firm was organized about six years ago conducting a first class meat market and gaining a reputation which has become well known throughout the community. Mr. Edwards is a thoroughly experienced meat market man, having been in business in Neokosa previous to buying into the local concern, and will doubtless enjoy a continuance of the good will of Grand Rapids people. Mr. Stewart states that he has not decided what he will do in the future, expecting to take about a month's rest. Mr. Stewart established the Stewart market in its present location about twelve years ago, being instrumental in building up a good substantial business and leaves it with the satisfaction of having conducted a successful enterprise.

BOUGHT GROCERY.

John Jackson closed a deal with his partner, Nic Tomysky, bringing him into possession of the Jackson & Tomysky grocery on Grand avenue. Mr. Jackson states that he will continue to operate the business under the name of the J. A. Jackson Grocery Co. OLD RESIDENTS OF SIGEL OBSERVE GOLDEN WEDDING

Fifty years ago Monday Miss Elizabeth Johnson and Mr. John Worlund were united in marriage in Sweden. Monday they celebrated their golden wedding anniversary at their home in this city with a family reunion and gathering which included many of their friends of this city. Mr. and Mrs. Worlund were among the pioneers of the county, coming here many years ago and establishing their home in the town of Sigel. Here they created an everlasting friendship with their neighbors, who are pleased to hear of their anniversary.

A program was carried out during the afternoon of the anniversary which included a prayer, the singing of a number of hymns, a talk by Rev. Olson, a solo "The End of a Perfect Day" by Mrs. John Worlund, Jr., a brief story of the couple's life by Rev. Monell, of Merrill, and the reading of an original poem by Magnus Olson.

The five children who were born to Mr. and Mrs. Worlund are John, Jr., Victor and Emma, all of this city. Mrs. E. Kalrose of Grand Rapids, Michigan, and Mrs. Charles Johnson of Minneapolis. The out of town guests besides the children were Rev. and Mrs. E. A. Monell, of Merrill, M. Olson, of Gladstone, Michigan, and a number of old friends from Sigel.

PLAN WORKING BOTH ENDS OF CO. ROAD

At a meeting of the County Highway Commission, held at the Court House last Thursday, preliminary plans for working out the county highway system were laid, it being planned to start work at each end of the proposed concrete road at Marshfield. The present plans would build three miles of road into Marshfield past the asylum on Trunk Line Thirteen, and would build three miles into this city on the Vesper road. The two preliminary plans that the highway men worked out and they are still subject to change, the general opinion was that this was the logical program for the year. The plan in the north end of the county are anxious to get a good road out to the asylum which the road men are providing for, and at the same time are working toward the end of a continuous road between the two cities. The road work at the Vesper road would be the initial step in this part of the county toward the completion of the concrete road.

There is quite a question that has come up with the highway men. It is whether the cement contract let by the county some time ago, whether they can be held to the contract or not. District Attorney F. W. Calkins is of the opinion that the cement dealer in this city can't hold the contract if he desires, which would mean that there would be about thirteen thousand barrels of cement delivered here in April. Should the county be unable to get the road work done at a satisfactory figure they would have the cement on their hands. According to F. F. Mengel the contract is not valid until endorsed by the state, which has not been done. He states that the state and a representative of the cement company has already asked that they not be held to this contract. The matter is now up with the local dealer if the contract is valid.

The matter of letting the road bids will probably be delayed until the contractors get a better idea of what conditions will be this year.

TWENTY-EIGHT PATROLMEN TO KEEP UP COUNTY ROADS

Twenty-eight county highway patrolmen will keep the state and county highways of Wood county in good shape the coming season according to plans laid at a meeting of the County Highway Commission at the Court House last Thursday, when it was decided to replace the road drangers in the county with patrolmen, and assume the care of the two hundred and thirty-two miles of road under the system next season. The men will work on an average of eight months a year and begin as soon as the snow is off the ground.

The decision to patrol the roads is an important item to the road advocates of the county, it meaning that there will be a man on practically all of the principal roads this year to fill up the rule, and to keep them in good shape and graded up during the year. The work will start in April as soon as the snow is gone, the patrolmen opening the ditches and culverts letting the spring water run off, and the road to be kept in good shape the time spring frosts are coming out and the rains prevalent, and in that way should have the roads in condition to travel considerably earlier in the year than they generally are.

On the system that has been laid out there are ninety-two miles of state trunk lines and one hundred and forty miles of county highway system. The system means that there will be some one definitely responsible for each patrol section.

COHEN WOULD BUILD COMMUNITY CENTER

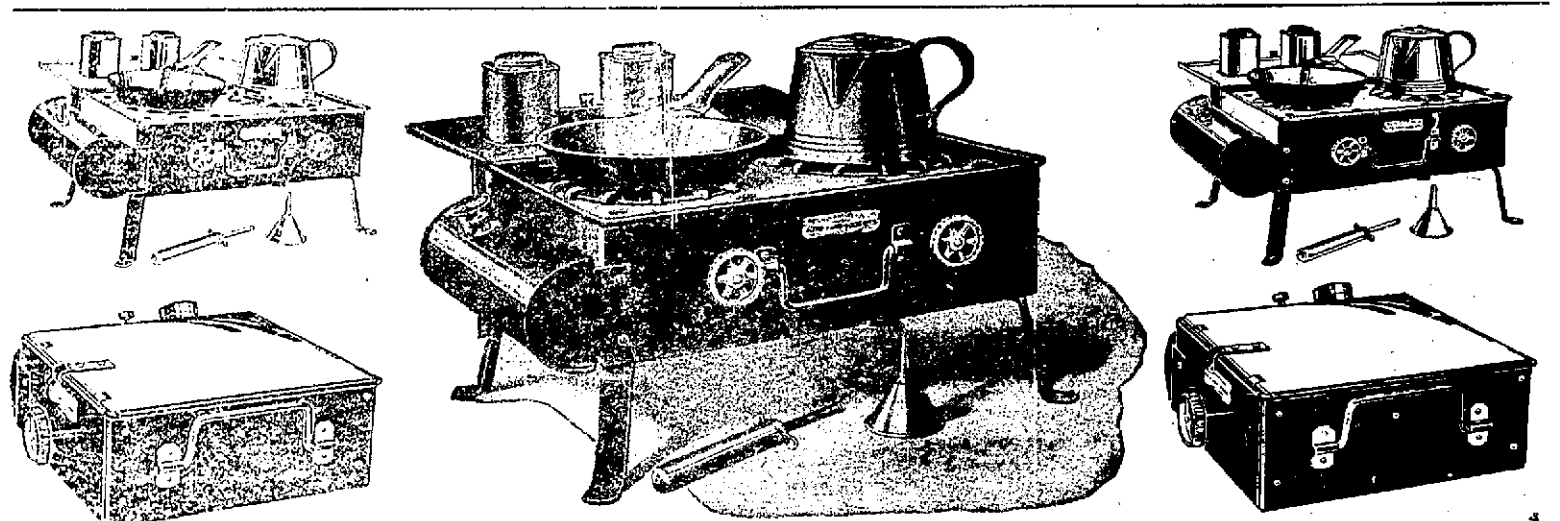

A plan to bring the people of Grand Rapids, Stevens Point, Marshfield, Vesper, Randolph, Mehan, Neokosa, Port Edwards, as well as all the farmers and the people of the other communities together during the summer, was suggested by J. A. Cohen at the Chamber of Commerce meeting Monday night, when he spoke on the erection of a Community Center Club House at Stevens Point. Mr. Cohen's idea would be to have every one that could in these communities take small shares of stock, possibly about $25 worth, and secure enough capital to erect a Community Club House about half way between Stevens Point and Marshfield. He suggested putting in golf links, baseball grounds, card table, picnic grounds, and have a chef at the building who could put up a dinner for any number of people. The plan would be to try club and have things ready for them upon their arrival.

Mr. Cohen explained the advisability of getting together with the people of the neighboring towns occasionally, and getting their ideas as well as giving them the ideas as worked out by local residents. He spoke of the opportunity that it offered the farmers to come to this country club at Stevens Point. He suggested putting in golf links, baseball grounds, card table, picnic grounds, and have a chef at the building who could put up a dinner for any number of people. The plan would be to try club and have things ready for them upon their arrival.

AUTO SHOW WILL BE REMARKABLE AFFAIR

The Automotive Show which opens this afternoon at the Amusement Hall promises to be the biggest affair of this kind ever attempted in a Wisconsin city outside of Milwaukee, and it will undoubtedly display as many different makes of cars, the beauties of the decorations and the manner in which it will be handled will rival the Milwaukee and Chicago shows. The decorations are the same as those of the Milwaukee show, taken down from the Auditorium there and brought here by Bert Ruddle, who decorated the Milwaukee Auditorium. The Amusement Hall here has been decorated under his direct supervision and is a marvel of beauty and design. The show continues through Sunday and it is expected that close to ten thousand people will visit the display during the four days.

On Sunday there will be special trains here from Stevens Point and Marshfield, run over by the dealers of those cities, bringing in a large crowd of people from this Central Wisconsin community.

There have been more than thirty cars on the floor on display, two tractors, trucks, and fifteen accessory companies with booths showing the many accessories that can be placed on cars. The fact that the necessary displays come from all parts of Wisconsin, Milwaukee, Eau Claire, Madison, Green Bay, and many other cities, indicates that the show is going to be a big one and that dealers around the state appreciate the fact.

DEATH CALLS MANY RESIDENTS OF CITY

Frederick Wittenberg, three year old son of Mrs. Fred Wittenberg, passed away Tuesday morning following a short illness. The funeral services will be held this afternoon at 2:00 o'clock at the home of the Rev. Thurman officiating.

Sam Kingston, one of the old residents of this city, died at the poor farm last Friday at the age of 89 years. Deceased had been suffering from a cancer for many years and had been an inmate of the poor farm but a short time. The funeral was held Tuesday morning at the home of his son John Kingston, in this city, Rev. Wm. Reding officiating.

Miss Mary Malicke, a former resident of Aldorf, but an inmate of the Mt. Washington sanitarium at Eau Claire for the past eight years, died at that institution last Thursday. Miss Malicke was 29 years of age at the time of her death. She was well known here, having attended the schools of Grand Rapids. She is survived by one sister, Frances Malicke of North Dakota, and three brothers, John of this city, Frank of Milwaukee, and Charles of Arizona. The funeral services will be held Monday morning at 9:00 o'clock at the John Malicke home, and 9:30 from St. Lawrence Catholic church, Rev. Ciszewski officiating.

Frank Seehagen, one of the well known residents of this city, passed away last Thursday evening at the age of fifty years. Mr. Seehagen was born in Germany but has made his home in Wood county for the past thirty years, living in this city for sixteen years. The funeral services were held Sunday afternoon from the west side Lutheran church, Rev. Thurman officiating, with burial in Forest Hill cemetery. Mr. Seehagen is survived by his wife, two daughters, Mrs. Ellis Krieger of Cleveland, Ohio, and Miss Mattie of this city; and one son, Rudolph, of this city; his mother, Mrs. Ernest Seehagen, one brother, Charles, of Burnett, Wis., and two sisters, Mrs. Wm. Richards of Juneau, and Mrs. Chris Martias of Aldorf.

Mrs. Henry Sereff of Rudolph passed away last Wednesday evening at her home in this village. Mrs. Sereff was sixty-four years of age, and is survived by her husband. The remains were taken to New Glarus for burial.

Mrs. August Loeffelbein, aged fifty-five years, passed away at her home in this city Tuesday morning after an illness of several weeks. She is survived by her husband, a husband, one daughter, Mrs. August Miller, and one son, Charles Loeffelbein. The funeral services will be held this afternoon from the First Moravian church, Rev. Melicke officiating.

Oliver Dudley, one of the old residents of this city, passed away at the Wood County asylum at Marshfield Wednesday afternoon. Mr. Dudley was in the neighborhood of seventy-five years of age and was committed to the county institution about two weeks ago, his mentality gradually failing with old age. The body was brought to this city this noon, the funeral arrangements to be made later.

CITIZENS WANT LOAN ASS'N. TO HELP BUILD UP CITY

The matter of getting housing facilities for the city council is being taken up by the Chamber of Commerce and the Citizens' Loan Association. The plan would be to get an association formed as soon as possible that might be some building done this summer. The house question, it was explained, is an acute one in Grand Rapids at the present time, and until some provision can be made to house people they will not locate here. People are storing their furniture in many places, being unable to secure a house or rooms in which to locate permanently.

While there has been some talk of local manufacturing concerns putting up houses especially for their employees, the new association would probably be organized entirely outside of this movement, there being such an unusual demand for homes that everything that the private concerns would do in this way would not take care of the demand. Marshfield, it was explained, has organized an association in their city, and while it was not known what they had done, the plan has been very successful in many cities and would undoubtedly work out well here.

The board of directors of the Chamber of Commerce was appointed as a committee to investigate the matter and see what action could be taken to bring about some immediate results.

One local business man has pointed out that with the extension the park north of the bridge and south of the bridge would be connected, and the extension would really be an advantage rather than a detriment. Mr. Mengel states that the plans are being worked out at Madison and while they may be ready this spring, there will be no rush in letting the contract.

CHAMBER OF COMMERCE TO KNOW BRIDGE DETAILS

In order that the Chamber of Commerce will represent the citizens of Grand Rapids, may know more definitely what the new concrete bridge will be like which it is proposed to build across the Wisconsin river this summer, T. A. Taylor suggested to the members at their meeting Monday night that a committee be appointed to look into the details, writing them up and presenting them to the Chamber.

One of the matters of interest that Mr. Taylor brought up was the proposal of putting in a brick roadway on a dirt foundation, in order that it might be torn up without heavy expense should the water piper or telephone and electric lines which will run under the roadway give trouble. He questioned the advisability of putting a brick roadway on a dirt foundation, explaining that heavy traffic would soon ruin the surface and that it would be uneven. He explained the proposition of putting these pipes under the sidewalk with traps, making them accessible for repair work, making a permanent roadway. The matter of making provisions for decorations on the bridge was also suggested by Mr. Taylor, who believed that there should be the proper appliances placed in the structure to permit putting up arches and other decorations. The matter was left to the board of directors to see what was being done and to furnish details of the structure as soon as they were available.

TO HAVE COMMUNITY ROOM FOR FARMERS

Farmers who come to Grand Rapids to do their trading will have a Community Rest Room at which they can leave their children for the day, meet their wives after they finish shopping, eat their lunch, transact their business, or, in fact, use for most any purpose they wish, should the present plans of the Federated Women's Clubs of this city materialize. The women formulated a plan at the Woman's Institute at the Wood County Normal last week that Mrs. Hatch, the conductor, suggested, to provide the farmers of this community with a meeting place of this kind for their convenience, and without cost to them. They plan to open the Rest Room this spring, in a central location.

Mrs. D. G. Egge was made chairman of a committee to work out the details of the Rest Room, Miss Margaret Breene and Mrs. Otto Leubing other members who have been appointed up to the present time. The plan is to have a room where the farmers could reach it handily. She told of the Brown County Rest Room where they serve lunches at a minimum cost, soup costing from 3 to 5 cents a bowl, coffee a few cents, and other food in proportion. A good meal can be secured for about 15 or 20 cents, she said. If they do not care to buy a meal they may bring their lunch with them and just buy coffee, or eat their lunch there and buy nothing at all. They plan to have it arranged so farmers can leave children there for the day, even babies, doing their shopping considerably less time when not handicapped by having to care for the children, and making the day an enjoyable one rather than one to look forward to with dread. There would be a checking room for parcels, a place for the children to play, magazines and papers to read, wash rooms and other conveniences.

Mrs. Hatch brought the matter to the attention of the farmers in attendance at the Institute Friday afternoon, asking them how many would take advantage of such a place if it were established, and what they thought of the plan. They were unanimous in their support of the move and expressed their desire to see the women go ahead with their plans.

Mrs. Hatch explains that the women avoid any heavy expenses by donating their time and energy to the project. The Rest Room, thus avoiding the expense of a salary for a person staying there, Mrs. Hatch

MAY NOT COMPLETE BRIDGE THIS SEASON

The proposed concrete bridge across the Wisconsin river in this city will probably not be completed in 1920, F. F. Mengel, Director of the State Highway Commission states, under the present plans which the state has in mind. It is probable, he says, that the piers will be placed and the river bed, and everything pushed along so that the city will suffer the least possible inconvenience when it is put in. Should the piers be finished this summer it is possible that the work could be carried right on through the winter, and while the bridge was under construction the traveling public could use the old bridge. This would relieve the situation to a considerable extent and would probably mean that the work could be done at quite a saving the expense of providing a roadway on the old bridge might be eliminated.

In spite of the action that was taken by the city council in regard to lengthening the bridge, the city fathers objecting to the proposed extension of thirty feet, there has been considerable talk about the city since that time which would indicate that the city fathers who would support the state engineers in their theory that it should be lengthened. At the time the matter was taken up by the council the proposed extension was explained as one which would necessitate the digging out of the park of the west river bank which appeared there would make it an eyesore to the city. The engineers state, however, that this is not their intention, that the park would remain and the only time that the extra thirty feet would be used would be when high water needed the additional storage space.

One local business man has pointed out that with the extension the park north of the bridge and south of the bridge would be connected, and the extension would really be an advantage rather than a detriment. Mr. Mengel states that the plans are being worked out at Madison and while they may be ready this spring, there will be no rush in letting the contract.

GRAND RAPIDS PRODUCTS GOING TO DISTANT LANDS

The Prentiss-Wabers company on Tuesday received an order from Athens, Greece, asking for one of their world famous camping stoves and also requesting the exclusive agency for the stove in Greece. It is needless to state that this enterprising Greek was given the territory he asked for. The company also received an order from New Zealand recently, the customer asking that the stove be sent by parcel post as the quickest way of getting it there. If the mail goes as rapidly as it does in this country at the present time, it is probable that the stove will be of use to the New Zealand children in case he has any.

The company also ships stoves thru one of their jobbers to South America and Spain, and in order to satisfy the demand they now have a part of their stoves written in Spanish. This only illustrates what can be accomplished by judicious and persistent advertising. One gratifying feature of the company's business is the fact that wherever they have sold one of their stoves, orders for others have come in from the same territory, indicating that they give satisfaction and have only to be seen to be appreciated.

The business of this company, by the way, has increased enormously during the past year. Heretofore the winter months have been rather dull with them, but this winter they have had all the business that they could attend to, and at times even more, owing to their inability to get in rail shipments as promptly as they should.

ROTARIANS CELEBRATING THEIR ANNIVERSARY WEEK

The fifteenth anniversary week of the Rotary Club was opened in Grand Rapids Sunday evening when Carl Mattie of Wausau spoke to the public under the auspices of the Rotary Club at the Congregational church. Mr. Mattie outlined the purpose of Rotary Clubs, told how they were to bring business men into a better acquaintance, and how they advocated the application of the Golden Rule in business. He touched upon the present problems in industry, spoke of the evils that the Non-partisan League is producing in certain sections, the dangers of the strike, and made a strong plea for Americanism.

At their Monday luncheon on Wednesday the Rotarians listened to Guy O. Babcock, who told them of the progress of the Rotary Clubs, building their organization from one club with four members in 1905, to about 600 clubs with about 50,000 members in 1920, and without the aid of a single paid organizer. He stated that the Rotary Club that had been once formed had ever surrendered its charter.

Friday night the Rotarians are to enjoy a banquet and invite the ladies, a program being under preparation for the occasion.

CHAMBER OF COMMERCE TO KNOW BRIDGE DETAILS

In order that the Chamber of Commerce will represent the citizens of Grand Rapids, may know more definitely what the new concrete bridge will be like which it is proposed to build across the Wisconsin river this summer, T. A. Taylor suggested to the members at their meeting Monday night that a committee be appointed to look into the details, writing them up and presenting them to the Chamber.

One of the matters of interest that Mr. Taylor brought up was the proposal of putting in a brick roadway on a dirt foundation, in order that it might be torn up without heavy expense should the water piper or telephone and electric lines which will run under the roadway give trouble. He questioned the advisability of putting a brick roadway on a dirt foundation, explaining that heavy traffic would soon ruin the surface and that it would be uneven. He explained the proposition of putting these pipes under the sidewalk with traps, making them accessible for repair work, making a permanent roadway. The matter of making provisions for decorations on the bridge was also suggested by Mr. Taylor, who believed that there should be the proper appliances placed in the structure to permit putting up arches and other decorations. The matter was left to the board of directors to see what was being done and to furnish details of the structure as soon as they were available.

Alabaster City In Spain

A Street in Cadiz.

CADIZ has made up its mind to be equal to the opportunities which the after-war world affords. We shall hear of Cadiz in many ways, says The Christian Science Monitor. It has taken note of the new determination of the northern ports such as Vigo, Bilbao, and others, and of the fact that Cadiz is making a big forward movement, and Spain generally being in an advantageous position in the matter of maritime commerce, it conceives a more brilliant future opening out for it in the new world conditions than ever it had dreamed of, Vigo, with the confidence of the Americans, is understood, is about to make a strong bid for the carrying trade with North America, and as the main port of entry into Europe from the upper half of the American continent.

But Cadiz has had advantage in the past with regard to the South, and hopes not only to maintain it, but to strengthen it. She has been in effect, a great receiving and distributing center, dealing with the South American states, and spreading the goods she received over Portugal and all Spain. She has flourished, and she has done well by herself in every way. But with Cadiz as with practically every other place in Spain, there has in modern times been a decline and a recovery. It is believed now that the recovery will be great.

The New Movements. Cadiz starts the new period with a blue new equipment in the matter of her harbor. The new Reina Victoria pier will astonish the commercial men and travelers who go there after a long absence. The San Felipe breakwater has been extended, and there have been dividing and widening operations, so that capacity and accommodation are now much greater than they used to be. Big liners may now berth themselves well, and as soon as they are hitched up they will find the newest electric traveling cranes and all the most up-to-date port appliances in operation.

Cadiz bids to the future come, and with Vigo, Seville, Bilbao and Barcelona it helps Spain to make a new challenge to the world in maritime matters, and this she must certainly do. No country has such a fine seaboard and one so advantageously situated. The Spaniards have thought of the maritime possibilities of their country before now, but they are thinking of it intensely in the new condition of the world economies. Already far more ships are calling at Cadiz than before the peace—though these were called to not amount to much. In the old pre-war days the Hamburg-American line established a regular monthly service from there to Panama, Colon, and San Francisco, and the French passenger lines were making regular use of the port, and the English boats did so regularly. The war interfered naturally with most of these services, but now they are being resumed.

Should Be Approached From Sea. While in these present days and hours when everything is so new, and things seem secondary, it is always hard to talk and write of Cadiz in the purely materialistic way. She has splendid harbor facilities, perfect opportunities for trade. About her streets and places there is a hustling,

On the other side are the words, "In the Name of the French Republic," surrounded by a wreath of oak leaves encircled by the republican device, "Liberty, Equality, Fraternity."

MERCY FOR "HELL FIGHTERS" Yanks Who Stole Army Shifts From New York Base Get Off With Ten Days.

New York.—Sergeant Arthur Holliday of the "Hell Fighters," who lives at 157 West 14th street, Manhattan, winner of the French cross of war, was spared a long term in prison because of his war record when he pleaded guilty before Federal Judge Chaffield to stealing supplies from the army base at Fifty-eighth street, Brooklyn. Abraham Gillard, also a veteran of the negro regiment, of 90 Prince street, the first man to enlist under Colonel Hayward, was in court on a similar complaint.

Judge Chaffield sentenced Holliday to ten days in jail, the term he had been in the Raymond street jail, and promised similar punishment for Gillard when he is sentenced October 20. The men stole a couple of army shirts.

Booming Japanese Commerce. Among recent instances of government help to Japanese commerce is the founding at Singapore and Harbin of commercial museums as headquarters for Japanese trade. The museum located at Singapore will aid in the development of trade in the South seas; that at Harbin will serve Manchuria, Mongolia and Siberia.

Always White and Clean. This the city is always white, quite smokelike, and is kept spotlessly clean. It glitters in the sun against the blue Andalusian sky, with waters lapping at nearly all around. The poets and the descriptive writers have almost exhausted themselves in their use of fine adjectives to describe its beauty and yet they feel they have failed. Spaniards call it their "razza de plata," or silver dish; some of them say it is more like a "palacio de plata" beautifully chased, and from another aspect they liken it to a great alabaster ship floating upon the waters. No terms are too strong in which to speak of Cadiz thus seen from the sea, for she is indeed very beautiful, veritably "a white pearl set in a crown of sapphires and emeralds."

The interior of no city could completely match such an outside view, but yet Cadiz, within, is good and pleasant, and is always extremely clean. But it is a very practical place, and though it has the cathedral with a spire rising over all, it has little in the way of art—one of the oldest cities of Spain though it be—to attract the visitors who need it for their lingering at any place. It is a place to wonder at, to tarry at for but a little while, and then to leave, knowing it full well to be unforgettable. But in the new days of traveling that are being given to the world, the wonders of the south of Spain, and through neglect, miss seeing Cadiz from the water. It will live in his memory when he has forgotten many pictures. It will hold its place in his esteem even when he comes face to face with the incomparable Bay of Naples.

Lengthens Life of Trawl. Just as no angler in fresh water is always trying new flies, new ground-baits, and new spinners, so the sea fisherman is beginning to employ new methods for taking sea fish. As most people are aware, the most deadly engine for fish catching is the so-called "otter" trawl, which resembles an enormous fish with a gaping gullet and is dragged over the bottom of the sea. The worst of it is that a trawl wears out very rapidly. Not long ago it occurred to an enterprising skipper to fit the lower warp of the trawl with rollers, so as to make it travel more easily over the sea floor. This has been a great success.

Ax Gelf. The old farmer was trying to impress upon his son, who wanted to play golf for exercise, that chopping wood would answer the purpose just as well. "Oh, no, father," said the boy, "it is the walking between strokes that makes golf such valuable exercise; that gives the legs a chance as well as the arms." "Oh, that's all," said the old man. And then he went into the yard and placed stacks of wood at intervals all around it. After this he handed the boy an ax and said: "Now, play the full course."—San Francisco Argonaut.

SENATE SWAYED BY YOUTHS

Conspicuous Examples of Precocity Furnished by the British Commons, the Mother of Parliaments.

For a long time it has been a British boast that the house of commons is the most widely representative of all legislative bodies, since it includes not only all social grades, but numbers among its membership men of all ages, from the mere youth to the octogenarian.

So long ago as the year 1613 there were 40 legislators in the commons who had not attained their twentieth year, and, incredible as it may seem, certain of these were only sixteen years of age.

Edmund Waller, the poet and courtier of Stuart days, was a schoolboy of sixteen when he qualified as a M. P. He was, as Clarendon says, "brought up in parliament," and probably furnished the only instance of a man who had not upon two-thirds of a century to his debut as a legislator.

Charles James Fox was but nineteen when he was "returned" to parliament for the "pocket borough" of Malbury. He was not many weeks older when he made one of the finest "maiden speeches" ever heard at Westminster. "I heard it spoken of by everybody as a most extraordinary thing," his father wrote to a friend, "and I am not a little pleased with it."

Chesterfield was a legislator at twenty, when he entered the commons. His first speech is said to have "electrified the house." His triumph was, however, undiminished by the circumstance that as he was not yet of age he was liable to a heavy fine for speaking in the house.

More precocious yet was William Pitt. Although he had passed his twenty-first birthday when Appleby sent him to parliament, he had with him a few weeks after the taking of his seat established himself as the keenest debater and the finest speaker in the commons. Upon the conclusion of the "maiden speech" a member of the opposition was reported to have observed to Fox: "Pitt will be one of the first men in parliament." "He is so already," replied Fox.

Pitt was scarcely twenty-three when he was made chancellor of the exchequer. At twenty-four he was prime minister.

End to "Hotel of Kings." The Hotel Bristol, nicknamed "the hotel of kings," and considered the most select in Paris, is now no more but the remembrance of a brilliant and picturesque past. Founded in 1867 by a British subject, Mr. Morlock, whose son is still the head of the firm, the hotel soon after the year 1870 was patronized by King Edward VII, then prince of Wales, whose photographs with autograph signatures can be seen in the hotel's salons, some from his early youth when he wore a square black beard, and others belonging to a later period with the small pointed beard which gave so much fineness to his humorous smile.

King George of Greece, King Leopold of Belgium, both dubbed "old England's Queen," Alexandra, King George and Queen Mary, the king of the Belgians and many others have been among the royal guests of the Bristol. And there it was, too, that Don Carlos, king of Portugal, was introduced to his future bride, Princess Amelia, then princess of Wales. An American bank is now moving into the historic building.

Fatal Famine After Feast. A play, a dance and a feast, winding up a season of plenty, was responsible for the near extermination of the Quiglingg tribe of natives last winter and spring, according to John H. Kilbuck, superintendent of schools for the Kushokwim River (Alaska) district.

The famine following the feast, Mr. Kilbuck said in his annual report to the bureau of education, caused the deaths of at least 42 of the natives, and would have wiped out the entire clan had not missionaries with winter and spring, according to John H. Kilbuck, superintendent of schools for the Kushokwim River (Alaska) district.

Forefathers' Day. In 1620 on the eleventh of December by the Julian calendar, which was in use in England, the "Pilgrims" arrived in the colony of Plymouth, went ashore and explored the adjacent country. They found open ground, brooks and woods so situated as to be suitable for a settlement and returned to the ship to announce that they had decided to colonize on the coast. When the Gregorian calendar was adopted in England in 1752 the dates between September 2 and the date of the landing of the Pilgrims fathers to December 22, which is the day now celebrated as Forefathers' day.

Snake's Fascination a Myth. Those who have had much experience with snakes and have had their business to observe carefully their habits and ways, have found that the condition in the wild state and in captivity, state that in no instance have they known a snake to fascinate an animal in the manner in which it is alleged to do. One authority speaks of two species many a time in trees surrounded by a crowd of fluttering, chattering, excited birds. But the snakes, he says, were endeavoring to intimidate it in order to frighten it from their haunts.

Promise With a Provoc. A Chicago boy of six was being shown through the Art Institute by his mother, who stopped before one of the "old masters" and, after explaining the beauty and value of the picture, said: "Now, dearie, won't you promise to remember all I have told you about this picture?" The young hopeful said: "Yes, I will if you will promise never to bring me here again."

Foundation of True Beauty. The truest beauty arises from a noble character. A soul which is radiant with love and truth lights even the homeliest face into beauty which is not transient, but which grows ever deeper and more abiding as the years pass on.

A CHANGE OF HEART

By CAROLINE LOCKHART

(Copyright.)

"I hate kids; I despise kids," said Dad Walker querulously, as he rubbed a clean place on the window-pane and looked at the household goods of Doodly, the squawman, going into the dock, leaving the street. "There's eight of them Doodly young uns, if I got the right count on them. They'll mull round so fast it's like counting sheep."

"Some folks is all same pigeons," observed Bacon-Rind Dick, who was mixing baking-powder biscuit in the kitchen.

"Er Belgian hares, er French Canadians, er field-mice, er—"

"I'll come up off the reservation to put his kids in school, I reckon." "He furnishes the school and we furnish the teacher. Personally myself," declared Dad, sourly. "I don't aim to educate eight Doodlys after this year. I've paid school taxes and packed schoolmarm's back and forth from the railroad as long as I'm 'gin' to."

"Well, them Doodlys ought to be company for us this winter, with everybody movin' out of the camp." "Company! I won't have nothin' to do with 'em. I hates half-breeds worse nor pizen, and I don't want them kids to get in the habit of runnin' over here. They're liable to pick up something."

"That's so," Bacon-Rind replied dryly. "They might steal the stove, or the bunk, or that thirty-pound bear-trap."

"Makes no difference; and if they start visitin' here, I'll tell 'em where to get off at."

By dwelling upon the Doodlys and the manner in which they would over-run him during the winter, Dad had come a kind of monomaniac upon the subject.

Looking through the window-pane he demanded with the same regularity with which some people complain upon the weather:

"Whatever kin a man think of is self to marry a blanket squaw?"

To his surprise, he was not molested by the Doodlys.

When the days grew short and the towering mountains, surrounding the abandoned copper-mines of Swift Water made them even shorter, the long evenings seemed interminable. Bacon-Rind thought wistfully of the Doodly family, whose shrieks of exuberant laughter frequently penetrated the silence which lay between the two parties. Long sit he talked out.

"These snows ought to have brought the sheep down," he said one day, regarding the white mountains speculatively. "I believe I'll get Billy Upton and take a hunt. I bankers for sheepmeat. You won't be long gone?"

"Lonesome! Me?" Dad snorted. "I was seven months alone once, whar the timber was so thick you had to lay on your back to see the sun."

So Bacon-Rind packed his camp outfit on a cayuse and started with Billy Upton for the hills.

Never had thought of him as anything else; yet he missed his partner uncommonly. He had to admit that.

"If Bacon-Rind ain't back pretty soon," he said peevishly, "I'll git worse nor the wild man I knooved in Wisconsin, who lived in a hollow tree and ate a deer at a sittin'."

"Gee, but you're a awful big man!" Stammered Dad, dropping the can and turned to look at the owner of the shrill but friendly voice.

Recovering from the slight embarrassment caused by the steady gaze of a pair of black eyes, he replied: "And I'm in the runt of the family. Father was twenty-two inches between the eyes, and they fed him with a shovel. What might your name be?"

"Maudie Doodly. I got a awful splinter in my foot, an' ma's washin' and I won't take it out, so I tramped away. Cold day, holdin' up a bare foot which she had thrust into an old moccasins. 'I bring a pin for you to get it out with,' she added."

"Do you want to pizen yourself, usin' pins?" demanded Dad sternly. "Gee, you got awful blue eyes!" observed Miss Doodly, quite unmoved.

She followed Dad into the house, and, pulling up a chair, thrust her bare foot into his lap. She was so entranced and fascinated by Dad's unconscious grimaces as he pulled at the splinter with a needle that she forgot the pain of it, and said flatteringly when he had finished:

"You don't hurt half as much as ma. You don't like to hurt me, nuther, do you?" "I hates cryin' and yellin'!"

"You don't like injuns, nuther, do you?" "Some injuns." Dad replied evasively—"good injuns."

"I'm good. I never talk injun talk. My brother-in-law, he's bad. I got my sleeve tore out fightin' him, 'cause he was bad and talked injun talk. Can you sing?"

"Like a markin'-bird." Dad said grimly.

"What can you sing?" inquired Miss Doodly pointedly.

"Well, I can sing 'Whar the Silver Colony Vends His Way,' an' I can sing 'Bury Me Not on the Lone Prairie,' an' I can sing 'Away to the Barbaboo-boo-boo,' an' I can sing—"

"Sing 'Barbaboo-boo-boo.'" Dad hesitated.

"It ain't hardly a song," he admitted. "It's more like words set to a noise."

"Sing 'Barbaboo,'" reiterated Miss Doodly.

Dad cleared his throat and pitched his voice in a key which both amazed and delighted his visitor.

"Away to the Barbaboo-boo-boo!" sang Dad lustily. "To the Barbaboo, away, away! To the Barbaboo-boo-boo! To the Barbaboo, away, away!"

Almost any disinterested listener would have agreed that Dad had described his song rather well. It sounded like a hungry coyote howling in a bunch of willows.

"Sing it again, and trot me," commanded Miss Doodly, sliding from her chair to climb into Dad's lap.

She came the next day after school hours, and the next day, and the day after that, always bursting into the room in a manner which suggested fight; and each time the same dialogue took place between them.

"Sing 'Barbaboo,'" "Aw—you don't want to hear 'Barbaboo'."

"'Barbaboo.' Make a lap. The buttons on your coat hurt my ear. There!" "Away to the Barbaboo-boo-boo!"

"Trot me!" "To the Barbaboo, away, away! Away to the Barbaboo-boo-boo!"

It was a ravishing song!

"When the snow flies deep like this, and it comes off cold and sets in to blow, I feel like blin' myself," he muttered irritably.

It was lovely! Even as Dad groaned, the door of the squawman's house opened, and Maudie Doodly, looking over her shoulder like some wild creature, stepped into the street.

Dad's heart leaped joyously, but sank again as she turned and began floundering through the snow toward the pole bridge.

Yes, she was wading through the drifts to the pole bridge.

She always stopped there on her way to school to see if that big, black trout was still lying motionless in the pool below.

She reached the bridge and stood on the edge, peering into the water. Dad reached for his sheepskin coat. In the second that he took his eyes from the swaying little figure on the bridge, it disappeared! His inarticulate cry was like a bellow as he tore open the door and covered the intervening drifts in leaps and bounds.

When Doodly, the squawman, and Harrison, from the other side, had reached the bridge, the icy waters of the pool already had closed over Dad's head. The widening circles told where he had sunk, and the tense seconds were minutes long before he rose. His face was livid with the terrible cold—cold which numbed like a paralytic shock.

"Gee, he's ketched to something!" he gasped.

"Come out!" yelled Harrison. "For reply, Dad sank once more; and when he rose again a chilly skirt was gripped in his stiffened fingers. With the last desperate stroke of which he was capable, he dragged Maudie Doodly under the water, and the next instant he was gone.

"It's no use," said Harrison, and he looked at Maudie Doodly lying beneath the torn red cloth on Dad's bunk. "She was under too long."

"She's dead!" The squaw cried a little in the corner of her shawl and went home.

Doodly and the seven little Doodlys followed him, sniffing.

It was hours later that Bacon-Rind approached the cabin, a hind-quarter of sheepmeat upon his back, a beaming smile of anticipation upon his face. Some sound from within caused him to listen.

"Away to the Barbaboo-boo-boo! To the Barbaboo—away!" Bacon-Rind grinned and scraped his feet on the snow.

ASSERTS SHE SAW HEAVEN

SEES GLORIOUS SIGHT

Upward, Without Wings, She Flew, Accompanied by Spirit of Dead Girl—Met by Loved One Who Had Gone Before.

Boston.—She went to heaven with the spirit of a dead girl. Such is the remarkable claim of Edith J. Cross-Buchanan, an English woman.

Shut doors did not impede her progress. Upward, without wings, she flew, until a broad white light of steps was reached.

Writing in the International Psychic Review, Mrs. Cross-Buchanan relates her experiences as follows:

"I found myself at a girl's death-bed. She opened her dark eyes and said gently: 'Open the right hand side small top drawer of that bureau and in the right hand side front corner is a lace handkerchief; I want you to have it.'"

Remained in Air. "She closed her eyes and lay very still then opened them again slightly. The light in them faded, as a glorious being, exactly like the girl in feature and height, only very beautiful and younger, slipped slowly out of the top of her head and remained in the air near the pillow."

"I put one arm around the spirit, and with the other hand closed the mortal eyes. Then, clasping both my arms about the spirit, and saying 'Come,' we passed through the shut door into the night."

"Upward, in a slanting direction, we went, till suddenly a brilliant light enveloped us, and we passed by a flight of broad white steps. At the top was a vast room, with pillared open front. At the head of the steps there stood a group of people—apart from the others in the room, who were of all nations—who came forward to us as we floated up the steps."

"I approached them, saying, 'Here she is; I brought her to you,' and I gave the girl over to them. I knew they were her mother and father, and other loved ones who had previously passed over. Ah! with what love and gladness they took her into their midst; but she herself seemed unconscious of it all, though her eyes were now open."

"Then I felt myself falling gently backwards, and found I was floating in a reclining position, through space in the night, and entered the death-chamber again, and gazed on the peaceful face of the dead body."

"I have omitted many details, but this I may add: The spirit had no wings; neither had I. Her garment was flowing and gloriously white and pure. I had on the usual robe I wear during the day, and anything but glorious, though it became so when we entered the light."

"The colors of the celestial scene are indescribable, but anyone who has had a glimpse of another plane than ours will realize what they were."

WIFE SAVES HER HUSBAND Springs in Front of Bandits and Receives Bullet in Her Heart.

Passaic, N. J.—Mrs. Maurice Goldstein gave her life to protect her husband from three bandits. The Goldsteins were closing their store, when the men entered, drew revolvers and told Mr. Goldstein to hand over his money.

Mrs. Goldstein sprang in front of her husband and screamed. The bandits fired and she fell dead with a bullet in her heart. The bandits escaped.

Never Kissed Baby. Los Angeles.—Lorenza C. Close told Judge Crail that his wife, Elsie H. Close, never kissed her baby and that she made him care for the child.

This developed at the proceeding instituted by the mother to gain possession of the child, who is now with a nurse employed by Close. The mother admitted she had not kissed the child, but explained that her failure to do so was in the interests of hygiene. The court ordered the child to remain where it is, but gave the mother permission to see it as she desired.

Chicago.—There can be no happy ending to the story of Joseph Buckley and his wife. They found too late they were half brother and sister. So the man has asked Judge Sheridan E. Fry for an annulment of the marriage.

"Dora and I met in San Francisco," said Buckley in telling of his wrecked romance. "It was love at first sight, and there was nothing out of the ordinary in that."

Don't stay stuffed-up! Quit blowing and snuffing! A dose of "Pape's Compound" taken every two hours until three doses are taken, usually breaks up a cold and ends all grippe misery.

The very first dose opens your clogged-up nostrils and the air passages of your head; stops nose running; relieves the headache, dullness, feverishness, sneezing, soreness, stiffness, "Pape's Cold Compound" is the quickest, surest, most reliable remedy only a few cents at drug stores. A Triumph. "Was the Gracelin reception a success?" "I judge so," replied Mr. Dubwate, "Yes?"

"Mrs. Gracelin's Paris gown was such a marvel that quite a number of the ladies present left earlier than they intended, and I understand they were very disgruntled to their husbands on the way home."

WHY DRUGGISTS RECOMMEND SWAMP-ROOT

For many years druggists have watched with much interest the remarkable record maintained by Dr. Kline's Swamp-Root, the great kidney, liver and bladder medicine.

It is a physician's prescription. Swamp-Root is a strengthening medicine. It helps the kidneys, liver and bladder do the work nature intended they should do.

Swamp-Root has stood the test of years. It is sold by all druggists on its merits and it should help you. No other kidney medicine has so solid a record.

Be sure to get Swamp-Root and start treatment at once.

However, if you wish first to test this great preparation send ten cents to Dr. J. C. Kline, P. O. Box 588, New York, for a sample bottle. When writing be sure and mention this paper.—Adv.

I was induced by a friend to try the Golden Medical Discovery, and after taking it for some time I was entirely cured of all my ailments, and am very grateful."—MRS. MAGGIE A. DIEHL, Elysia, Mich.

FOREIGN SHERRY STUDENT PASSED AWAY AT GARY

On Feb. 7th at Gary, Indiana the passing of a bright young life is of interest to many people here. A young Assyrian Persian came to America with her father when a young child. The mother having died and their young girl came to Sherry to attend the Northwest Collegiate Institute. She was a student there for five years, graduating in 1915. She spent two years in an orphanage at Evanston, Ill., with Anne Jane Ardis and then married a young man of her own nationality, Samuel Benjamin and met to Gary to live. A baby daughter was born to them, but the mother had the influenza and here but only to live in far lands in the Path's House. Hannah Jahanan was 23 on Dec. 10th, 1919, but she will live long in the memory of her friends that are left behind. Little Jane, the 15 months old daughter will never know the beautiful young mother who wanted to live so much for her little ones sake and the husband has lost much in the passing of the young wife.

WILL FURNISH BAND.

By a unanimous vote of the Chamber of Commerce at their meeting Monday night it was decided to furnish a band for the auto show next Sunday afternoon, the Chamber of Commerce taking care of the expense. It was explained that the show is to be an exceptionally good one and that the local dealers are going to a good deal of expense to put it on, and that it is up to the Chamber of Commerce to back them up in their undertaking. The band will meet the excursion trains that come in from Marshfield and Stevens Point that day.

This Is All Rotary Week!

Community of Interests Begun in Chicago Fifteen Years Ago Now World Famous as

ROTARY

An organization which in 600 cities of the United States and Canada and elsewhere has come to be known in each locality as a power for good, an example of high standards of ethics and personal character, and a cross-section of the substantial business element of each community.

The remarkable growth of Rotary has been spontaneous, entirely without the aid of systematic or paid organization work, and stands today A Monument to A Big Idea which has "sold" itself to the alert, wide-awake, progressive business element of America and of the World. Wherever you find a Rotary community, that community is led by the Creed of Living Right.

To the Rotarian, Community Prosperity is greater than personal profit. His city is the "best in the country" and his country the "best in the world." The Rotarian is an all-wool, yard-wide he-man, who works hard, plays square, and gives with a smile. He has an eye for a neighbor's need, a hand trained to help, and a heart for true men, good women and little children.

Origin

Rotary was born Feb. 23, 1905. Four Chicago men, one a lawyer, one a mining operator, the third a coal dealer, and the fourth a tailor, decided on that day to organize a club. These men, drawn together through mutual acquaintance, proposed a series of meeting at their respective places of business.

The circle soon was enlarged by representatives from other lines of business so that within a year a membership of fifty was reached.

As the time came for each to act the host, he gave a discourse on his own business so that his guests might learn something worth while regarding it, and thus broaden their own knowledge concerning various businesses outside their own.

Growth

In 1908, San Francisco, having learned of the Chicago Rotary Club, patterned one after it. This was in turn rapidly followed by others. Eventually, the National Board of Commissioners, a delegate body representing fourteen clubs, arranged the first National Convention. This was held in August, 1910, at Chicago. At that time the term "National Association of Rotary Clubs" was adopted, but a few years later was changed to "International" in recognition of a Canadian club represented and an application for membership from a club which had been organized in London.

Rotary is now established in the British Isles, in South America, Cuba, Hawaii, the Philippines, China and India.

All clubs seeking membership are carefully surveyed to insure proper caliber of personnel and adequate representation of sufficient lines of business to justify membership in the International Association.

The name "Rotary" was selected early in the life of the Chicago Club and was suggested by the early meetings which were held in "rotation" at the various members' places of business.

The Rotary Platform

Recognizing the commercial basis of modern life as a necessary incident in human evolution, the Rotary Club is organized to express that proper relation between private interests and the fusion of private interests which constitute society.

To accomplish this purpose more effectively the principle of limited membership has been adopted, the Rotary Club consisting of one representative from each distinct line of business or profession. Each member is benefited by contact with representative men engaged in different occupations and is enabled thereby to meet more intelligently the responsibilities of civic and business life.

The basis of club membership insures the representation of all interests and the domination of none in the consideration of public questions relating to business. On account of its limited membership the Rotary Club does not constitute itself the voice of the entire community on questions of general importance, but its action on such questions is of great influence in advancing the civic and business welfare of the community.

The Rotary Club demands fair dealings, honest methods, and high standards in business. No obligation, actual or implied, to influence business exists in Rotary. Election to membership therein is an expression of confidence of the club in the member elected, and of its good will towards him. As his business is an expression of himself, he is expected actively to represent it.

Membership in the Rotary Club is a privilege and an opportunity and its responsibility demands honest and efficient service and thoughtfulness for one's fellows. Service is the basis of all business.

He Profits Most Who Serves Best!

Objects

The "objects" of the Rotary Club are to encourage and foster—

- High ethical standards in business and professions;
- The ideal of Service as the basis of all worthy enterprise;
- The active interest of every Rotarian in the civic, commercial, social and moral welfare of his community.
- The development of a broad acquaintanceship as an opportunity for Service, as well as an aid to success;
- The interchange of ideas and business methods as a means of increasing the usefulness of Rotarians;
- The recognition of the worthiness of all legitimate occupations and the dignifying of the occupation of each Rotarian as affording him an opportunity to serve society.

Membership

The Rotary Club is restricted to one member from each distinct line of business or profession. Such a plan makes for thorough representation by all branches of business, yet prevents an unwieldy number or the domination of any club by any one business or profession. Such a membership becomes an ideal forum for the consideration of public or civic questions. It prevents lagging interest, for if a lagging develops he is dropped for a new and alert member.

Contact and exchange of ideas with diversified business interests is broadening in every sense and tends to introduce fresh thought and new viewpoints into every business and profession represented.

Summed up, Rotary is Man's Humanity to Man at its Broadest, Biggest and Best. Wherever you see a Rotarian, there you see a good citizen, an asset to his community and a leader in his craft.

RECIPE FOR GRAY HAIR

To half pint of water add 1 oz. Bay Rum, a canful of Borax Compound, and 30 oz. of glycerine. Apply to the hair twice a week until it becomes the desired shade. Any druggist can put this up or you can mix it at home at a little cost. It will gradually darken streaked, faded gray hair, and will make harsh hair soft and glossy. St. Charles Man Tells How He Suffered Before Doan's Cured Him.

"Heavy strains on my back and being exposed to all kinds of weather, weakened my kidneys," says John S. Shelton of St. Charles, Mo. "The misery in my back was constant and I had to get up several times during the night to pass the kidney secretions. I got no rest night or day and in two or three weeks I had gained twenty pounds in weight. My eyes burned as if they were on fire and I was going to pitch forward. I tried to catch my breath by taking a sharp knife into my back. My kidneys were so weak that I could not control the secretions. I was so weak and so tired that I was unable to do any work. I was advised to use Doan's Kidney Pills and when I did I was soon relieved of my misery. Doan's cured me."

Mr. Shelton. In answer to a physician who asks what is the cause of death in hanging, and how soon it occurs, a medical journal says that if the knot be properly adjusted, instant death from breaking the spinal cord is produced, but in a majority of cases asphyxiation is the cause of death. In this the man may retain consciousness for from a few seconds to a minute and a half and may retain life for from 15 to 20 minutes.

GOING SOME AT KRUGER'S

By FRANK A. WARD

(Copyright.)

Hank looked at the monkey, perched on the window sill, and the monkey looked back. There matters rested. "Maybe you're real," he gasped, "but then—"

He shook his head as if, in the dim light of the single oil lamp, he could not be certain. Whistling to keep up his courage, he let his weight fall in the rickety chair and picked up the pen.

He paused, staring at a eye at the visitor sitting there in a given Buddha. Never in his nine months at Kruger's Crossing had he seen such a phenomenon. It frightened him.

Meanwhile the creature shifted a bit on the stool. Instantly Hank robbed his eyes, and sat up with a jerk; for now two monkeys grew where one had grown before, and a swaying branch outside showed their means of entrance.

For days he had been in the depths of melancholia, and the climax had come that evening when he settled down to write his letter of resignation.

As to reasons for his leaving, there were several.

First, ambition—not to be gratified by fifty-five dollars a month was a post in a signet ring, passed through monkey's paw, second, third, fourth and all the rest, there was Mollie Carey, she of the frightened eyes and round face.

But it was upon monkeys that the operator's mind was busy just now and creeping each moment a shade nearer the edge of masculine hysteria.

"They're not real, or—Ah-h-h!" A howl, slicing the silence of the night like a knife, floated in at the windows, and with it the man's sigh was of poignant relief.

"Idiot!" he exclaimed. "I might have remembered!"

Three miles away and to windward the cry of the coyotes across more even as he had heard it on many dreary nights, recalling the wild-animal farm on the hill.

A red eye down the line winked white, and a few seconds later the monkeys huddled closer together in a hush of the locomotive whistle.

Again the animals watched the operator as he threw the lever back to even as he had heard it on many dreary nights, recalling the wild-animal farm on the hill.

Twice as he paused for reflection he put the business end of the penholder in his outraged mouth and jumped up spluttering.

As if at a signal a batch of monkeys—Hank swears there were twenty—leaped from the branch to the window ledge and thence among their brethren. The place was broken out with chaos, like the measles. They shot through the air and landed on the levers; two of them found Hank's hand and fled, shrieking, from his wrath.

At length, with perspiration streaming into eyes already half blinded by dust, Hank stood still.

A great calm descended. "This," he panted grimly, "is no place for a minister's son."

With one despairing glance at the whirling derisives, he darted for the stairs and went down, three steps at a jump. At the foot he just missed collision with a woman's figure.

"Mollie!"

"Is it—It's robbers?"

"As he said," he grinned.

For he had seen her, he sketched the face of Kruger's Crossing, but before he was half way through the girl was laughing until her sides were aching.

"Yes," he cut in, "but how about the ladies they're raising up there? Come on out!" He led her forth upon the tiny platform at the side of the tower. "Look at that!"

His finger was pointing to a semaphorette on the north of the cabin. It was winking up and down in a helpless way which suggested an old woman signaling a street car.

"The girl's face became serious under the semaphorette." The semaphorette stopped its winking, and after a slight pause they heard the clank of one of the cross-over switches. The chamber broke out anew from the tower in the tower. One of the monkeys danced a war-dance on the window sill.

"It's a fine wind-up," Hank estimated, with a grin.

"The girl was puzzled. 'What do you mean?'"

"In quitting—that's all. I wrote the blundering president of their road that I'm through."

Every One His Own Manufacturer. On the old frontier there were no blacksmith shops, no tanneries, no stores of any sort, all utensils were either made by the blacksmith or purchased from the tannery. But money was almost an unknown article among the hardy Buckskins, hence they either traded pelts for goods or went without, consequently their ingenuity and skill was highly developed and they came times even made their own guns and knives.

"The famous Bowie knife was not invented by Col. Bowie, but was made by a white-smith from Philadelphia for the dauntless colonel and adopted by the latter, whose name the weapon still bears. Colonel Bowie, by the way, did give the smith a pattern drawn on brown paper but when the knives were finished he chose the design made by the smith."—Dan Beard in Boys' Life.

Sustenance in the Mesquite. The mesquite yields excellent food for both man and beast. One authority says that the bean, of which husk and all are used, contains over 50

"But why?" she had to know. "Why? Because of you. We could never live on the prairie. You're getting to be a hole. It's you, Mollie, dear. Oh, stop that racket, you ring-tailed baboons!"

But at that instant came another sound. It was a long-drawn shriek, echoed about among the hills.

"Good Lord!" Hank cried. "The G. M.'s, special—and the cross-overs are—Heaven knows how!"

Only one thing remained, but he was too late.

Even as he turned to dash upstairs for his lantern a third blast cut the air, and he heard the barking roar of the engine die away.

In its place was the grind of the brakes as their flanges bit the wheels. He gazed, stupefied. Suddenly he remembered those lever-throwing apes.

"Saved!" he burst out almost hysterically.

From one of the brightly lighted cars a knot of men jumped down and ran swiftly across the tracks.

"What is the name of the Gadarene swine," shouted the first on the platform, "dyo you mean by folding up my special? We gave you orders."

At that moment Hank might have had for the general manager was swept from him.

"Monkeys," he answered curtly.

"What?" The rest of the official statement was mercifully indistinct. He turned now to the girl for the first time.

"Is the man crazy, or just plain drunk?"

"Neither," she retorted, "and if you knew what he'd gone through for your old railroad you wouldn't be insulting him now!"

"Perhaps you would be kind enough to explain this talk about monkeys giving him his orders," came the G. M.'s, withering fire.

Hank took up the burden. "You can see for yourself," said he, "if you look at the tower."

They all looked.

The whole ship's crew of simians, attracted by the arrival of the train, had gathered in the windows, their bodies silhouetted against the light in the room.

"Now," Hank went on, "perhaps you'll believe me. They came—three of 'em—about an hour or so ago. I didn't pay much attention, because I thought they would get tired and run away. So—"

"Hold on," broke in a gray-haired man with hard eyes. "Monkeys, young man, don't grow in this part of the world."

"Yes, they do," the operator patiently explained. "There's a farm about three miles north of here, where they keep all sorts of wild beasts. As I was saying, I didn't mind the three until they began running about the tower and trying to throw the levers like they'd seen me do. Then more of 'em dropped in. I chased 'em. One put the wires out of business, and—"

"I see," said the gray-haired man, whose eyes were now twinkling a bit; "they made a monkey out of you. Well, gentlemen, we'd better drive out the foe and get the railroad in operation again."

"Hurry up or anything that's handy and mount to the stage. Come on!"

But at the tremendous racket of the attacking party as it climbed the stairs, broke ranks, with cries of terror, broke ranks. Head over heels they piled out of windows and raced away, a medley of waving tails and scampering feet.

"My word," stighed the president as he sank into the only chair and held his sides. "I haven't had so much fun since the cat came home! Hullo! What's this?"

In his hand was the operator's letter, blotched by the tracks of monkeys which had raced across the table.

Hank, trembling, and with Mollie's hand in his own, nodded bravely as the official's eyes bored into his.

"Resign?" sneered the great man. "His eyes now suddenly softened, rested for a moment on the girl, who grew scarlet. 'Hunk! Seems to me you need a job now more than ever.'"

"I had another chance, sir, with a firm in Kansas City," Hank began. "and the pay here is so small—"

"Pay? Is that all the trouble? Here, George," the official queried, "anybody who's smart enough to resign for a moment on the girl, who grew scarlet. 'Hunk! Seems to me you need a job now more than ever.'"

"Good! What's your name? Well, Redwood, I'll see that you're put on the day shift at Curzon, where the pay's a hundred a month."

"He'll accept, all right," said Mollie.

Lincoln Highway Gets Nearly $12,000,000 in 1919

ASHINGTON—Lincoln Highway—the great national outdoor memorial to Abraham Lincoln—is faring well these days at the hands of eleven states, through which it passes. The Lincoln Highway, which was at first largely a series of connecting country roads, has gradually become, through official action of the various states, an integral portion of the several state highway systems.

Expenditures on the way in 1919, for new construction, reconstruction and maintenance were, as follows by states: New Jersey, $1,383,572.00; Pennsylvania, $1,418,169.25; Ohio, $1,903,708.10; Indiana, $742,218.80; Illinois, $1,430,126.28; Iowa, $236,899.29; Nebraska, $613,025.00; Wyoming, $127,000.94; Utah, $225,528.54; Nevada, $111,049.58; California, $375,500.00; total, $8,896,800.31.

To these figures must be added much of the country construction and maintenance work and city paving, for which it is impossible to get accurate detailed figures. Conservative estimates resulting from actual inspection of such work in progress indicates that these unreported expenditures amounted to over $600,000 in 1919.

The association also points out that contracts covering a total of 169.8 miles of permanent improvement were let in 1919 in seven of the states traversed by the route, the total amount of these contracts aggregating an additional $2,323,112.59—money already provided and in addition to that actually expended for work completed in 1919.

The total financing for the way in 1919 therefore amounted to $11,709,912.90. Comparison with the figures for the years since the association began its work show the significance of this total. The amounts expended were: In 1914, $1,200,000; in 1915, $2,580,280; in 1916, $4,198,165; in 1917, $2,000,918.96; in 1918 $2,096,307.77.

The General Federation of Women's clubs, which has charge of the planting of the way, plans to have it beautified with trees, shrubs and flowers and to make it a bird sanctuary from coast to coast.

Discontented School Pupils Make Child Laborers

THE million and more children under sixteen years of age who leave school annually in the United States to go to work are not all forced into industry because of poverty, according to the first official reports of the Children's bureau on the "back to school" drive held in connection with Children's Year.

Schools must be made more attractive and parents more sensitive to the value of a completed education, says this report. One reason for keeping children in school is keeping them out of industry before they are prepared to assume these burdens. The experience of child welfare committees showed that discontented school pupils became the child laborers.

Unattractive school buildings, poorly trained teachers and sparse equipment are factors in making the boy or girl restless at school. It is also declared that the present federal child labor law does not reach more than 300,000 of the 2,000,000 working children over ten years of age, as at least three-fourths of these are in the agricultural districts.

In many cases there are no schools to attend. The "back to the school" drive stimulated local surveys of the school resources. Some of the schools were closed for lack of teachers, and the general report lays this lack to the low salaries paid. A few of the states met this condition by making a minimum teaching salary from $1,000 to $1,200, but there are communities where teachers are paid only $40 a month.

It was the opinion of those conducting these campaigns that once the parents were reached the ways and means of keeping the child in school would be forthcoming.

All the World Has but a Wagonload of Diamonds

EVERYBODY is buying diamonds these days. It seems as if the supply was inexhaustible. Yet a Chicago statistical expert has figured out that if all the diamonds mined in history and existing today as cut and polished gems were gathered from the ends of the earth, they would form a pile about as large as a wagon load of coal dumped on the sidewalk.

The pile would contain 46,353,474 carats, and the gems would weigh ten and one-half tons. If the pile were in the form of a cone, it would have a base diameter of eight feet and a height of five feet. Reckoning the diamonds at $300 a carat, it would have a value of $13,906,942,200. It would contain 120 1-3 pawns, worth $5,580,022 a pair.

So, 70 1-3 bushels valued at $51,670,720 a bushel. All the world's diamonds are in the ordinary clothes closet or a kitchen pantry.

India, it is estimated, has produced, all told, 50,000,000 carats; Brazil, 25,000,000; South Africa, 170,374,000; Borneo, 1,000,000; British Guiana, 50,000; Australia, 150,000; China, 2,000; Siberia, 500; United States, 500. This is a total rough output of 226,777,374 carats or 55.35 tons avoirdupois.

Only about 50 per cent of rough diamonds are cut into gems and lose about 60 per cent of their weight in being cut and polished. Diamonds are practically indestructible and the first diamond ever mined may possibly still be in existence; some princess or millionaire's wife or a waitress in a restaurant may be wearing the world's first diamond or a fragment of it. But the estimate allows for the loss of at least 1,000,000 carats by flood, fire, shipwreck and other disasters.

These reductions and losses leave the total of cut and polished diamonds at 46,353,474 carats.

Molluscs Start Scientist After a Lost Continent

DETAILS concerning a lost continent in the Pacific ocean, a 6,000-mile prehistoric "bridge" of land between South America and Hawaii, is being sought by an American scientist, William Allanson Bryan, professor of zoology and geology in the college of Hawaii.

Dr. Bryan went to Argentina by way of Mexico and the west coast of South America, where he studied volcanoes and Andean geology. He will sail for the island of Juan Fernandez, 400 miles out. The island is inhabited by a small colony of fishermen.

"In the Philadelphia Academy of Natural Science," says the professor, "I was surprised a year ago to discover certain little fresh water molluscs from Juan Fernandez that were extraordinarily similar in their characteristics to certain molluscs in Hawaii. So I determined to visit the island, study those shells and its entire flora and fauna."

If the Juan Fernandez molluscs should prove to be closely allied with those of Hawaii, Dr. Bryan explains, it would prove that land connection had existed, as the species must have traveled from Juan Fernandez to Hawaii, or vice versa, by the rivers of the prehistoric continent.

Professor Bryan considers it not unlikely that the lost Pacific continent preceded that of South America in the dark ages of time.

It was on Juan Fernandez that Alexander Selkirk, a Scotch buccannier, lived in solitude for four years (1704-1709). His story is supposed to have suggested "Robinson Crusoe" to Defoe. The flora and fauna of the island differ remarkably from those of the mainland.

Financial Problems Solved; Maids for Billions

FINANCIERS who are able to count up to nine billions tell us that our allies in Europe already owe us that amount of money for loans and want to borrow more. Some of our statesmen seem to think that we should remit the interest on these loans; others apparently would favor making these loans a gift. Also, there has been talk of difficulty in arranging credits, inasmuch as Europe apparently had nothing that we really wanted. Altogether, the financial situation has seemed rather mixed.

But the latest news changes all this. It is reported that 8,000 or so immigrants are landing daily and that 100,000 are expected in the next month.

What of it? Listen! The Travelers' Aid society says that great numbers of these immigrants are girls from Ireland, Scandinavia, England, Italy and other parts of Europe and that they are looking for employment and that they want to go into domestic service.

The Travelers' Aid society declares that these girls are the kind of girls we used to get for domestic service before the war—the kind that were used to hard work, that had no H. C. L. ideas of little to do and big wages, that were perfectly willing to stay with us until we had taught them to do housework and sometimes until they decided to get married.

WORK DIDN'T SHOW FOR MUCH

Lecturer's Wife May Have Had the Idea That She Was Wasting His Time.

The steel and coal strikes were on; the reds were busy in thousands of American communities stirring up anarchy; the civilized world was literally broiling with discontent; the profiteers were piling up their guilty millions unrestrained. And Fred Warren, former editor of the Appeal to Reason at Girard, Kans., a socialist lecturer of national renown, was starting out from home with his traveling bag in hand to fill a speaking engagement.

"Where are you going now?" inquired Mrs. Warren.

"Out to save the world," he replied. "How long have you been engaged in saving the world?" she asked retrospectively.

"About fifteen years," was his answer. "And now look at it!" she lamented.—Fort Scott Tribune.

Be Reasonable!

It was during her summer vacation on the farm that Elizabeth longed to be allowed to drive the big team of horses. She was just five, but one afternoon her cousin lifted her in and gave her the reins. She pulled and slapped them on the horses' back, and in fear of the team starting too swiftly, cousin Frances advised her to be careful and drive with less motion. Again she shook the reins violently.

"Sister, Elizabeth, and you'll be a better driver."

She held tight to her reins, then turned and said reproachfully, "Cousin Frances, what can you expect? I'm only a child!"

An Advantage.

Joe was visiting at grandmother's house and was being put to bed when he recalled that he had almost forgotten to say his prayers. He then said that at grandmother's knee—his usual "Now I lay me," ending by asking a special blessing for father, mother and his two little sisters.

At its close he realized he had not remembered his grandmother. "Why I forgot you, grandma," he said, and then smiled encouragingly "but don't you mind that. Pretty soon I'll be big enough to make my own prayers; then I can pray for everybody."

Assured Knowledge.

"How is it that woman knows so much about bringing up children?" "She never had any."

Worth Paying Premiums For.

A $5,000 life insurance policy was taken out on a hen exhibited in Portland, Ore., recently. This hen is a White Leghorn, owned by Doctor Tanned of Kent, Wash. She set a world's record for production by laying 330 eggs in 365 days, ending September 16. This is about four times the production of the average hen. Her owner consented to allow her to be placed on exhibition for one of the poultry food companies, but stipulated that she must be insured for $5,000.
